1	2017 The Nobel peace prize committee awarded the International Campaign to Abolish
2	Nuclear Weapons (ICAN) with the following motivation: "for its work to draw attention to
3	the catastrophic humanitarian consequences of any use of nuclear weapons and for its
4	ground-breaking efforts to achieve a treaty-based prohibition of such weapons".
5	Nuclear weapons are the single biggest threat to humanity and the continued existence
6	must be seen as an international failure. Today's weapons have more than doubled
7	explosive forces than those bombed 72 years ago over Hiroshima and Nagasaki and
8	could destroy cities with millions of inhabitants. Such an attack could also trigger a chain
9	reaction that results in a nuclear war with unpredictable humanitarian consequences.
10	Ever since the destruction of nuclear weapon became known, a great deal of diplomatic
11	work has been done on its abolition and disarmament. Thanks to great efforts, the Cold
12	War's extensive nuclear weapons arena has been reduced from record levels of up to
13	70,000 nuclear weapons to today's approximately 15,000. During that period, South
14	Africa, Ukraine, Kazakhstan and Belarus have completely abolished their nuclear 15	arenas. This is a great success and shows that disarmament is possible. The non-

16 proliferation treaty, the so-called NPT agreement, often referred to as the cornerstone of 17 the world's disarmament and non-proliferation work, has been of fundamental 18 importance here. Two key elements of the agreement are, on one hand, to prevent the 19 proliferation of nuclear weapons to more states than the five that have already acquired 20 nuclear weapons when the agreement entered into force; USA, Russia, Great Britain, 21 China and France, and partly that these states disarm their arsenals.

22 At the same time, in a historical financial statement of the NPT, the failures should be 23 noted that additional nuclear weapons states like India, Pakistan and North Korea have 24 been added. Unfortunately, we see how many of the original nuclear weapons states
25 are now modernizing their arsenals in a way that is in violation of the NPT Agreement's 26 basic purpose of long-term disarmament.

27 Recent nuclear weapons threats from North Korea and USA show that not only the use 28 of nuclear weapons must be banned but also manufacturing, storage and deployment.
29 No country should be allowed to help another state to build a nuclear weapons arena.
30 No companies or pension funds should invest in mass destruction. Of course, the 31 convention meets resistance. The United States and other nuclear forces are pushing 32 for other states not to ratify.

34 Therefore IUSY demands:

35 - That the member states of UN ratify the treaty banning nuclear weapons.
