IUSY is a youth-led NGO umbrella organisation that gathers socialist, social-democratic and labour youth organisations worldwide. Founded in 1907, it concentrates its efforts on support and capacity building for young people fighting for freedom, human rights, social justice, equality and democracy, international solidarity and political solutions. It is the biggest political youth organisation in the world: over 140 member organisations in over 90 countries. IUSY has a long tradition in being involved in different activities through regional committees, seminars, workshops, trainings, and study visits. Activities implemented by IUSY are based on its fundamental values those of socialism and social democracy: freedom, equality, and solidarity. In essence these three values can be summarised by the word "democracy", as real democracy assumes and creates freedom, equality and solidarity at the same time. IUSY build bridges of dialogue and understanding, in which justice and intergenerational solidarity are present. It is essential to move to a paradigm in which the youth is not only accepted as subjects with legal rights, but also become important agents of social change in national, regional and global dimensions.

This report briefly presents the activities that have taken place between January-July 2020.
The crisis has mostly affected vulnerable people and groups in our societies and deepened already existing inequalities. Young people have been hit by the crisis too. Many of us have lost our jobs, many of us have not received any support or social protection. The pandemic also affected our educational process: schools, universities, youth centres were closed. Many of us faced interrupted or postponed volunteering or internship projects. Distance learning has been offered to many but many also left out from that process. Lack of internet, lack of computer or other devices did not allow many young people to follow the distance learning opportunities. Many young people with disabilities also were forgotten in this process. During our meetings, we have recorded concerns in increased housing insecurity, poverty, worsening of mental health. The crisis that made the issues that are deep in the system even more visible also showed the weakened democracies. Declared states of emergencies, nationwide lockdowns have been used to pass antidemocratic and discriminatory laws in many countries. This affected civic space putting it at risk. This crisis has also showcased how much the current economic system affects our environment and how we exploit our natural environment. As young people and youth organisations we have the opportunity to reflect and take steps towards protection of natural environment.

IUSY organised online activities and panel discussions to foster youth participation and international solidarity.

Since the beginning of the pandemic, IUSY has worked to ensure that activities planned were not left behind and that our member organisations do not lose the opportunities of meeting, learning and sharing. IUSY adapted to this new reality organising and engaging in different activities, meetings and solidarity actions. IUSY organised online activities and panel discussions where our members led the discussion and actions. In this time of uncertainty, we strongly believe that youth participation, empowerment and active political engagement is the way for system change.
Student Working Group Meeting took place 27-29 April on the theme of Students’ rights in the times of crisis. The aim of the three-day meeting was to learn on the implications of crisis situations on basic human rights and students’ rights and enhance student international solidarity. The meeting offered a platform to discuss how the situation has affected student life in the regions, give space to engage in a dialogue on common struggles and obstacles, and work together to come up with strategies to defend, advocate and campaign for students' rights in crisis situations. The working group published a statement and agreed to have regular online meetings discussing students issues internationally.

Feminist Working Group Meeting took place 11-13 May. The theme of the meeting was Feminist Activism in the time of Emergencies. The three-day meeting gave our participants the opportunity to share how they are doing in this situation and what is happening in their realities from the feminist perspective. As a direct outcome, working group published a statement. The working group is also initiating a series of webinars on Intersectional Feminism. The first webinar on “Women* and Social Movements” took place 28 June. Feminist working group will continue the initiative in the upcoming months focusing on different topics.

Queer Working Group Meeting took place 27-29 May. This year’s QWG recapped on the work done in the past year and worked further on guidelines and policy proposals for adapting their online activism to the current online times. The working group published the 2nd edition of the Guidelines on How to be a Better Ally. Working group plans to organize an online meeting to present the guidelines as well as a workshop on allyship. At the end of September 2020, working group will organise a webinar on Labour market discrimination.
