- 1 It is time that we recognize and take seriously the conflict between security interests and
- 2 the individual’s right to privacy. Our messages and calls need protection from state
- 3 surveillance. Proposals for chat control, where digital communication is monitored and
- 4 scanned to detect illegal content, represent a dangerous shift toward mass surveillance.

- 5 Even if the intention may seem good, these proposals threaten fundamental rights such as
- 6 freedom of expression and personal privacy. It is unacceptable for private conversations
- 7 to be scrutinized by systems without any suspicion of a crime. This violates basic
- 8 principles of due process and risks creating a “surveillance state.”

- 9 Furthermore, technologies used to scan communications could undermine the security of
- 10 our digital services, as encryption might need to be weakened. The world should take a
- 11 leading role in defending individual freedoms and rights in the digital age.

- 12 Instead of introducing these dangerous mass-surveillance tools, the focus should be on
- 13 strengthening existing legal frameworks and technologies that protect both security and
- 14 privacy. Organizations such as Amnesty International, along with numerous technology
- 15 experts, have warned about the negative consequences of chat control.

- 16 Based on this we propose:

- 17 • That IUSY work to protect individuals’ right to private communication
