5 In recent years, we have witnessed how major world powers have intensified their intervention and 6 interference in the internal affairs of multiple countries, using economic, diplomatic, media, and in some 7 cases even military mechanisms to influence the political and social course of sovereign nations. Far from 8 promoting democracy or development, these practices have deepened inequalities, generated instability, 9 and violated the right of peoples to freely decide their own destiny.

10 The Americas have not been an exception. Our region has faced external pressures, economic sanctions, 11 the financing of political actors, disinformation operations, and other forms of interference that directly 12 undermine the self-determination of our peoples and the full exercise of sovereignty. This responds to a 13 hegemonic logic that, in its drive to secure strategic resources and territorial control, is willing to turn the 14 hemisphere—and even the Arctic—into a permanent arena of intervention.

15 These practices openly contradict the principles enshrined in the Charter of the United Nations and the 16 Vienna Convention on Diplomatic Relations, fundamental instruments of international law that establish the 17 sovereign equality of States, non-intervention, and mutual respect as essential foundations of international 18 coexistence.

19 From IUSY, we observe with deep concern how, in recent months, the United States and the administration of 20 Donald Trump have intervened directly and indirectly in political and electoral processes in various 21 countries around the world. We also denounce the imposition of disproportionate economic tariffs on 22 several countries in the Americas, threats of military attacks against the Republic of Colombia and Mexico,
23 as well as statements by this administration regarding its intention to exert control over Greenland under the 24 pretext of strengthening the strategic security of the United States.

25 Through sanctions, diplomatic pressure, financial interference, and military interventions—such as the one 26 carried out in Venezuela on January 3—the United States violates the sovereignty of States, undermines the 27 democratic will of peoples, and attacks the fundamental principles of international law.
